

The weather outside may have been unpleasant, but that didn't stop students from filling the second floor of the cafeteria on March 25, 2018 as Quinnipiac's Tri Delta chapter held their first ever philanthropic event for St. Jude. Red and white streamers hung from the ceiling and were wrapped around the brick pillars.

The smell of pizza and various desserts wafted down the halls and the sound of music and people talking filled the air. Tri Delta member Nevi Acosta who is currently a junior majoring in English MAT said, "My favorite part about Delta Desserts is coming together as a sorority to help create bigger than ourselves."

In what would become a heated competition, sororities, fraternities, and other groups raced to decorate their cakes. Each team had 20 minutes to decorate their cake but it was as if time flew by resulting in a few teams being disqualified. Through this alone, Tri Delta was able to raise a good amount of money as each team paid ten dollars.

While some issues arose, the women of Tri Delta were able to pull off and run a successful event that included over 120 students. Orders for desserts that night came in like they would a local pizzeria as the last delivery shift ended at midnight, much to the girls delight.

As the action packed and sweet filled night reached its end, Tri Delta member and junior Zurama Rodriguez who is currently majoring in Behavioral Neuroscience, happily reflected of how she thought the night went. The excitement was clear as she stated, "We are still unsure about how much money we made, but last time we checked we had made around $700."
